POLICE in Sheffield were forced to swap places with Muslim women by dressing head to toe in full religious dress and then paraded around the city centre.

As part of a politically correct scheme titled 'In Your Shoes Day', two South Yorkshire police officers and a police community support officer took to the streets wearing Islamic outfits which leave just the face exposed.

They were accompanied by four Muslim women in order to 'learn' about the Islamic faith - how this will aid in their police work is anyone's guess.

The three officers who took part in the experience were all born and bred in Sheffield, while only two of the Muslim women were even born in the UK!

This kind of politically correct nonsense serves no purpose whatsoever. It is a vain attempt to appease and pander to a growing minority of people who refuse to embrace the British way of life.

The British National Party condemns these ludicrous initiatives. Police are paid to police our streets and ensure law and order, not to be part of the Government's scheme to turn our once proud cities into places our ancestors wouldn't recognise.

POLITICAL CORRECTNESS GONE MAD

Union Badge is 'Offensive' Says the Met

SCOTLAND Yard officers have been banned from wearing Union Flag badges in support of our troops because they are deemed "offensive".

Metropolitan Police chiefs ordered that the tiny emblems, which cost £1 with proceeds going to charity, must be removed after a complaint.

Whilst British police officers are forced to parade around our city centres dressed up like Muslims they are banned from flying or wearing our national flag.

A Met spokesman simply said: "Only approved corporate badging may be used." So essentially, Muslim garb is approved, but our national flag isn't.

The BNP say that this is just typical of the current political establishment - grovelling to appease foreign cultures whilst turning its back on our own. We support the brave officers who

POLICING SHOULD BE ABOUT STOPPING CRIME - NOT APPEASING MINORITIES

WHEN you knock on people's doors while canvassing for support at local council election time, it soon becomes apparent that the overriding concern of the vast majority of voters is crime and anti-social behaviour.

This is especially the case with our older generation who remember when policemen actually policed effectively and when there was a clear distinction between villains and victims. Now it seems catching criminals is of secondary concern as the length of time it takes officers to attend the scene of any burglaries clearly indicates.

In today's police force there are a whole set of different priorities and it seems that crime prevention, apprehending offenders and ensuring the guilty face prosecution are way down the list in importance.

This change of emphasis from the policing of thirty years ago has come about because of the pressure exerted by the influential politically correct brigade. Not only have those officers who have been groomed to take charge of our country's police forces been indoctrinated with a diet of politically correct nonsense, they have also been told in no uncertain terms that if they don't follow this PC code of conduct to the letter they will have no chance of any further advancement up the promotional ladder.

This brainwashing of our senior officers has left a massive gap between the way forward for policing as seen by the 'top brass' and the way to effectively deal with crime as seen by the ordinary officer.

This huge gulf was very apparent during the policing of the demonstrations against our Red, White & Blue Family Festival in Derbyshire last month. Roads were allowed to be closed by protestors in what was nothing more than organised thuggery, yet senior officers stood by and allowed this to happen because they had been told to give the protestors "every opportunity to voice their opposition to the BNP event."

Comment by Nick Griffin MEP

"Every opportunity" meant bringing all traffic in Denby and Ripley to a standstill causing five hours of disruption, yet senior officers were prepared to do this in order to appease the vocal minority seeking to demonstrate against our festival.

The rank and file officers on duty were livid. We know this because they told our members caught up in the gridlock. Numerous policemen standing around awaiting orders 'from above' said that roads could have been opened within minutes of them being blocked if senior officers had given the go ahead. This appeasing of the minorities instead of implementing effective policing policies is undermining the public's confidence in our forces of law and order.

And who can have confidence when our frontline policemen are told by their senior officers to desist from stopping and searching young black men on the streets of London for offensive weapons, despite the fact that these random searches have been at the forefront in reducing the number of knives and guns being carried in our capital city.

The British National Party is pledged to restore traditional policing values to ensure that the law-abiding majority can go about their business without the fear of being a victim of crime.

The prosecution alleged Dr Asha was the financier and supporter of the Glasgow airport terror cell.

He admitted knowing Abdulla and Indian engineering student Kafel Ahmed, 28, who died from burns sustained during the 2007 Glasgow attack, but he claimed they betrayed him.

Foreign Criminals Awarded £500,000 in Damages

FOREIGN criminals have been awarded compensation of £500,000 for being kept in custody beyond their release date.

The prisoners were held while the Government considered whether to deport them.

Alan Johnson, the Home Secretary, told MPs that between April 2008 and June this year the UK Border Agency paid out £498,897.21, but did not disclose how many prisoners were involved.

These individuals were not only criminals but they had also broken UK border regulations. They should have been deported immediately. Not one penny of British taxpayers' money should be wasted on payouts to those here illegally.

DESPITE the Home Office maintaining that Mohammed Asha still presents a threat to national security he continues to work for the NHS.

Asha was accused of conspiracy to murder and conspiracy to cause explosions. He told the tribunal he wants to stay in this country and continue his work as an NHS neurosurgeon.

The Government is no longer seeking to deport the doctor accused of involvement in the London and Glasgow bomb plots.

A Home Office source said that Asha's application for leave to remain in the UK is still being considered by officials.

However the source confirmed the Government was no longer seeking to deport Asha on the grounds that his presence was "not conducive to the public good".

Dr Asha was tried alongside British-born Iraqi doctor Bilal Abdulla, who was jailed for at least 32 years for plotting to murder hundreds of civilians in terrorist car bomb attacks on London and Glasgow.

The prosecution alleged Dr Asha was the financier and supporter of the Glasgow airport terror cell.

He admitted knowing Abdulla and Indian engineering student Kafeel Ahmed, 28, who died from burns sustained during the 2007 Glasgow attack, but he claimed they betrayed him.

The court heard that Dr Asha had given money to both Abdulla and Ahmed, and extremist material was found on the doctor's laptop. But he said he did not know the £1,300 he lent to Abdulla was to rent and buy cars and bomb-making equipment.

When Abdulla was convicted of conspiracy to cause explosions and conspiracy to murder, and Dr Asha was cleared, the two men embraced in the dock.

This man's close proximity to the very heart of the terror plot against the British public is highly suspicious and in the minds of many decent British people would no doubt make him unsuitable to work in the NHS. The BNP believe that this fact should rule him out of working within the NHS.

BNP CAMPAIGN TO BRING OUR BOYS HOME NOW!

THREE more British soldiers serving in the parachute regiment and fighting alongside special forces in Afghanistan have been killed after their patrol came under Taliban attack.

The soldiers, Private Kyle Adams, Corporal Kevin Mulligan and Corporal Dale Thomas Hoskins, died after their Jackal armoured vehicle was hit by an explosion north of Lashkar Gah in Helmand Province.

They were carrying out a routine security patrol alongside Afghan security forces when their vehicle was hit by an explosion before coming under small arms fire, the Ministry of Defence said.

It is thought the three soldiers, from the Parachute Regiment, were killed in the initial blast. A fourth member of the patrol was injured and remains in a critical condition.

The MoD refused to confirm any more details about the men, but it is understood they were working with special forces.

They belonged to the Special Forces Support Group (SFSG), which was formed in April 2006 to assist the SAS and Special Boat Service on operations, the Times reported. The SFSG is made up of personnel from the Parachute Regiment, the Royal Marines, and the RAF Regiment.

Its main role is to provide direct support for UK special forces missions, but it is also involved in domestic counter-terrorism operations.

This tragic and unnecessary loss of British life has yet again highlighted the inadequacies of the armoured vehicles supplied to British troops. The lightly armoured Jackal offers little or no protection against heavy arms fire and roadside bombs.

That the men were killed while riding in a Jackal is "particularly worrying", according to the defence expert Dr Richard North, author of Ministry of Defeat, about Britain's role in Iraq.

The Jackal was supposed to offer greater protection to British troops than the much-criticised Snatch Land Rover, in which at least 37 personnel have died in Iraq and Afghanistan. Yet 13 soldiers have now died in Afghanistan in a Jackal, which is based on a Land Rover design, since September. It is "fundamentally flawed", according to Dr North.

A fourth British soldier, Jason Williams, was killed trying to retrieve the body of an Afghan comrade.

Private Jason Williams was part of a platoon searching for the bodies of three Afghan national army soldiers killed during an earlier attack near Gereshk in Helmand province.

The mission was to stop insurgents taking the bodies, and two of them were found but while looking for the third corpse Williams set off a bomb laid by enemy forces.

The British National Party has repeatedly called for an end to this senseless and endless war which serves no real British interest. The BNP is the only party which would bring our troops home immediately. Not one more drop of British blood should be spilt for foreign interests.

MOD TAKES WOUNDED SOLDIERS TO COURT

DEFENCE officials and ministers have betrayed wounded British soldiers by seeking to cut their compensation payouts.

The Ministry of Defence has begun a court battle to try to slash awards given to two seriously wounded servicemen by up to 70 per cent. The legal action comes as British troops suffer their heaviest casualties since the beginning of the conflict in Afghanistan in 2001.

The MoD is appealing against a tribunal judgment that payouts to two injured soldiers should be increased after the men suffered complications to their injuries. Government lawyers are expected to argue that the ministry should have to compensate the men only for their original injuries, and not for the subsequent complications.

Anthony Duncan, a soldier with the Light Dragoons, was shot in his left thigh while on patrol in Iraq in September 2005. The MoD initially gave him £9,250 but he appealed and was awarded £46,000 and a guaranteed weekly income payment for life, the Sunday Times reported.

Royal Marine Matthew McWilliams broke a thigh bone on a training exercise. He was awarded £8,250 but a tribunal ordered the MoD to increase his payout to £28,750 and a guaranteed weekly payment because of damage to his knee following surgery.

The BNP say that when we are paying out 'compensation' to criminal immigrants who shouldn't even be here it's sickening that our government would challenge compensation payments to British war heroes wounded in battle.

We are the only resistance against the PC nonsense that is dragging this country into the mire. The same kind of nonsense that saw British police officers parade around Sheffield dressed as Muslims and the same kind of political correctness that will free the monstrous killers of Baby Peter within ten years.

That's why our MEPs are already inundated with e-mails, letters and phone calls from relieved constituents who finally have someone who will speak out for them.

The tide is rapidly turning, and for those protestors in Denby the message is clear - get out of the way or get wet. But then again, a good wash is just what they need!

IMMIGRATION RULES ARE A DRAIN SAYS JUDGE

HOW long will Judge Ian Trigger keep his job? This is the question being asked in legal circles after the Liverpool Crown Court judge dared to tell the truth about the great immigration swindle.

Sentencing a Jamaican drug dealer to two years imprisonment, the senior judge declared that hundreds of thousands of migrants poured into Britain merely for the benefit system handouts and this had helped to double the national debt.

Judge Trigger made the remarks while addressing Rastafarian Lucien McClearley, who had claimed asylum in Britain. "Your case illustrates all too clearly the completely lax immigration policy that exists and has existed over recent years," Judge Trigger said.

"People like you, and there are literally hundreds and hundreds of thousands of people like you, come to these shores to avail themselves of the generous welfare benefits that exist here.

"In the past ten years the national debt of this country has risen to extraordinary heights, largely because central Government has wasted billions of pounds. Much of that has been wasted on welfare payments.

"For every £1 that the decent citizen, who is hard-working, pays in taxes, nearly ten percent goes on servicing that national debt. That is twice the amount it was in 1997 when this Government came to power."

The accused arrived legally in Britain in November 2001 on a visitor's visa. He was arrested in October 2002 after it ran out but claimed asylum and was released while this was being processed.

He then "disappeared from the radar of the authorities" the court heard. His application was rejected in 2004 but he was only arrested this February after police stopped a car he was driving and noticed it smelled of cannabis.

A search of his house in Everton uncovered cannabis worth £7,200, ■ gram of cocaine and a fake passport.

Judge Trigger, who is also a part-time immigration judge, told him that the "fact that it took nearly two years to process your claim shows how desperate the situation in this country has become."

The British National Party commends Judge Trigger for his honest appraisal of the country's current chaotic immigration policy - or lack thereof.

Judges and the criminal justice system are often on the front line in the battle against uncontrolled immigration and its effects on Britain. It is refreshing to hear such honesty and see a man put the good of his nation above his own needs.

Jobless Numbers Rise 220000 to 2.4m

THE recession has claimed another 220,000 jobs in the three months to June to take the total number of unemployed to 2.43 million, official figures have revealed.

Unemployment in the UK is now at its highest level since the summer of 1995.

The data from the Office for National Statistics (ONS) showed that the number of people claiming jobseeker's allowance increased by 24,900 in July to 1.58 million - its worst level for more than 12 years.

This marks the 17th consecutive month where the so-called claimant count has increased in the UK.

Youth unemployment rose by 46,000 to 722,000, while the number of people out of work for longer than a year remained at an 11-year high, up by 36,000 to 543,000.

The British National Party would protect UK jobs and ensure that immigrant workers are not allowed to take our jobs.

The British National Party would protect UK jobs and ensure that immigrant workers are not allowed to take our jobs.

"People like you, and there are literally hundreds and hundreds of thousands of people like you, come to these shores to avail themselves of the generous welfare benefits that exist here.

"In the past ten years the national debt of this country has risen to extraordinary heights, largely because central Government has wasted billions of pounds. Much of that has been wasted on welfare payments.

"For every £1 that the decent citizen, who is hard-working, pays in taxes, nearly ten percent goes on servicing that national debt. That is twice the amount it was in 1997 when this Government came to power."

The accused arrived legally in Britain in November 2001 on a visitor's visa. He was arrested in October 2002 after it ran out but claimed asylum and was released while this was being processed.

He then "disappeared from the radar of the authorities" the court heard. His application was rejected in 2004 but he was only arrested this February after police stopped a car he was driving and noticed it smelled of cannabis.

A search of his house in Everton uncovered cannabis worth £7,200, a gram of cocaine and a fake passport.

Judge Trigger, who is also a part-time immigration judge, told him that the "fact that it took nearly two years to process your claim shows how desperate the situation in this country has become."

The British National Party commends Judge Trigger for his honest appraisal of the country's current chaotic immigration policy - or lack thereof.

Judges and the criminal justice system are often on the front line in the battle against uncontrolled immigration and its effects on Britain. It is refreshing to hear such honesty and see a man put the good of his nation above his own needs.

This marks the 17th consecutive month where the so-called claimant count has increased in the UK.

Youth unemployment rose by 46,000 to 722,000, while the number of people out of work for longer than a year remained at an 11-year high, up by 36,000 to 543,000.

The British National Party would protect UK jobs and ensure that immigrant workers are not allowed to take our jobs.

CONTORTED faces of hatred can be seen in this picture as members of immigrant communities brutally attack a white youth in Birmingham on Saturday 08.08.2009.

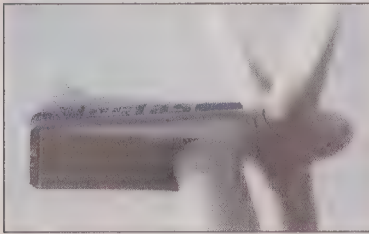

Although the British National Party has NOTHING what-so-ever to do with the planned demonstrations against Islamic Extremism in several major cities around the UK this summer, we believe that British people have the right to peacefully demonstrate wherever and whenever they wish.

However we urge all our supporters and voters to stay away from these events as by attending them you would not only put yourself in danger but also risk bringing the party into disrepute.

We also call on the police to identify those in the picture carrying out this brutal and cowardly attack on this lone white youth and prosecute the perpetrators to the full extent of the law.

Turbine Firm Vestas Closes Two Plants with 425 Job Losses

VESTAS the wind turbine factory on the Isle of Wight is to close along with another in Southampton, with the loss of 425 jobs.

The factory was the scene of an 18-day sit-in protest by angry workers. The occupation of the Vestas plant in Newport was an attempt by workers to delay its closure, but this ended after a court order.

The firm claimed it had mitigated job losses, with 40 employees having been found new roles within the Vestas research and development facility on the Isle of Wight and 57 employees continuing work at the factory for a further period to assist in its closure. That still leaves hundreds without work.

When Taylor was quizzed on the addresses he had frequented in the midlands Taylor said he had lived at "a number" of homes but declined to give addresses for any of them.

FOR DEAD MOTHER'S NON-EXISTENT HOME

BRITAIN'S first black peer received more than £70,000 in parliamentary expenses by making claims that were apparently based on a "non-existent" main home.

Lord Taylor of Warwick claimed he lived with his sick mother in the Midlands until 2007, allowing him to claim overnight expenses while attending the House of Lords.

However, inquiries by The Sunday Times have uncovered that his mother's home was sold in 2001 and she died in the same year.

This issue raises serious questions about Lord Taylor. What kind of man lies about his dead mother and claims she was still alive in order to claim illegitimate funding from the taxpayer? To use the memory of one's mother in such a way plumbs new depths even for establishment politicians.

The findings raise serious questions about the probity of Taylor's expense claims and clearly should prompt an investigation by the House of Lords authorities or the police.

Between 2001 and 2007 he claimed "overnight subsistence" totalling £73,000 by stating his main home was outside London. Peers who live outside the capital can collect £174 a night tax-free as reimbursement for the cost of a hotel or maintaining a second home while attending parliament.

He stated: "[My mother] was in poor health for a number of years. In addition to working in the Midlands, I spent as much time with her as I could when not attending the Lords, before travelling back down to London.

"For these reasons, I nominated her home as my main home. It was a Taylor family home. I helped to maintain her and her home financially. My second home was in London. This arrangement came to an end in 2007. I have not claimed the second home allowance since."

However Taylor's former wife's family had bought the house to support his mother and sold it in May 2001 when she was in a nursing home. She died of heart failure in December that year.

In contrast to most other lords, Taylor has never volunteered the location of his main residence on the published expense forms.

The British National Party calls for a full investigation into the system of expenses for both the House of Commons and the House of Lords. These people are here to serve the taxpayer - not simply to live the high life at the taxpayers' expense!

PENSIONS BLACK HOLE REACHES

SHOCKINGLY the pension fund shortfall of Britain's biggest firms has more than doubled to a record £96 billion in a year, a report has revealed.

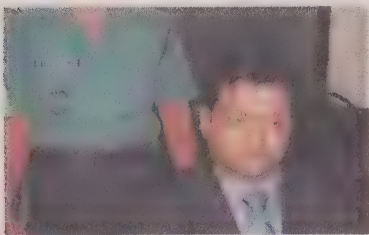

Actuaries Lane Clark & Peacock (LCP) said the financial crisis had from its current level of 4,600 to more than 7,000 to wipe out the deficits.

LCP partner Bob Scott said the deficits had ballooned since March this year as historically low interest rates hit bond yields, mitigated job losses, with 40 employees having been found new roles within the Vestas research and development facility on the Isle of Wight and 57 employees continuing work at the factory for a further period to assist in its closure. That still leaves hundreds without work.

Man With 'Bag of Passports' Held at Airport

A BANGLADESHI man who lives in Bedford has been arrested after allegedly being caught with more than 180 passports.

Motiur Rahman was arrested at Sylhet Airport in Bangladesh while allegedly carrying more than 180 passports as he was trying to return to Heathrow, it has been reported.

Immigration officers also found Home Office seals within the luggage, it is claimed.

When the local paper visited his home which he shares with his mother, wife, son and three daughters they were told that it was 'not a good time'.

The British National Party would not have allowed Rahman back into the UK once he had been found with the passports as he is not a British citizen.

PENSIONS BLACK HOLE REACHES £96 BILLION

SHOCKINGLY the pension fund shortfall of Britain's biggest firms has more than doubled to a record £96 billion in a year, a report has revealed.

Actuaries Lane Clark & Peacock (LCP) said the financial crisis had helped send the combined deficit of FTSE 100 companies' pension schemes soaring from £41 billion a year ago - a total which had been £12 billion two years previously.

The current £96 billion funding gap, calculated from data last month, is the largest recorded shortfall recorded under the international accounting rules currently used for Footsie pension funds, the firm added.

LCP said the plunging values would pile more pressure on companies to stop offering defined benefit pension schemes for employees.

Just three FTSE 100 companies - Cadbury, Diageo and Tesco - said they offered defined benefits to new employees, the report said. The report also calculated the FTSE 100 share index would need to rise from its current level of 4,600 to more than 7,000 to wipe out the deficits.

LCP partner Bob Scott said the deficits had ballooned since March this year as historically low interest rates hit bond yields, which are a major source of pension scheme funding.

Pension schemes have faced a double whammy of falling asset values and rising liabilities due to factors like people living longer in recent years.

The British National Party says that the establishment needs to stop burying their heads in the sand when it comes to pensions.

There is a huge pension time bomb looming which threatens the future for millions of pensioners both now and in the future.

We need to start panning now to stop this crisis in its tracks. Pension schemes have been raided by the government and unscrupulous companies alike. People paid into those schemes with good faith and they should all be honoured.

HARRIET HARMAN'S ANTI-MALE RANT

HARRIET Harman made a total fool of herself on day one of her tenure as stand-in Prime Minister. She decided to shout her mouth off about what is really ruining Britain, not Labour - but men!

Harman got off to a disastrous start as she tried to explain how voters are fed up with 'boys running the show'. Infact it is men then that are the real reason as to why millions of voters are deserting Labour - nothing to do with mass immigration, unemployment and stealth taxes!

She went on to tell everyone how she will ensure that the Labour Party rules are changed in order to determine that one of the two top jobs in the party must always belong to a woman - a sure fire way to solve all of Britain's problems.

But why make one idiotic outburst when you can make two? Ms Harman continued in the same vein blaming the current banking crisis on men!

She laid the blame for the scale of the financial crisis on the male domination of our top banks. Of course it has nothing to do with the disastrous financial management of our economy by the Labour party.

In Ms Harman's words: "Somebody did say...that if it had been Lehman sisters rather than Lehman Brothers then there may not have been as much difficulty."

WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with many more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Much tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of capital punishment for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the £billions wasted in foreign aid to fund 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the European Union for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union to restore Britain's freedom. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside. A ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need, an end to field trials of GM crops, and the restoration of our 200 mile fishing limit.

It would be hard to get a genuine answer on what her fellow MPs and party colleagues think about her little outburst.

However when quizzed on her 'Lehman Sisters' comments financial wizard David Buik described her comments as "simply bonkers." He went on to say, "I have never heard such twaddle in all my life, it is outright nonsense."

What we have here is a militant feminist - no more no less. A woman that does not want equal rights or equal pay - but merely hates men. The militant feminism born in the 1960s has done nothing for the 'rights' of women, but has merely created a deeply unnatural division between the sexes where rather than man and woman working hand in hand they look at one another with unease.

What's worse, Ms Harman is using all of this as a convenient way to shift the blame away from the real culprits - the left-wing looneys who run the Labour Party.

These would be the same breed of left-wing looneys who foisted Ms Harman's brand of militant feminism upon us, brainwashing generations of decent young women. It's time to wake up and smell the coffee Harriet - it's your type of people who are to blame, and by that we mean communists, not women!

MP IN MUSLIM WEDDING WALKOUT

MINISTER Jim Fitzpatrick has come under criticism for walking out of a Muslim wedding after being told he couldn't sit with his wife.

The Muslim Council of Britain quickly responded by advising Fitzpatrick to "brush up on his social skills".

Mr Fitzpatrick was offended that women were forced to sit in a separate room to men under strict Islamic 'Sharia' law which treats women as second class citizens.

Isn't it bitterly ironic that the men-hating feminists of the far left are so desperate to embrace Islam and import more of its followers into Britain.

We also question why it is that feminists like Harriet Harman will criticise everything in Western society as being some form of discrimination against females but when it comes to the treatment of women in Islamic communities they stay very tight lipped indeed.

Again the double standards and mixed up thinking of multicultural Britain is laid bare for all to see.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside. A ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need, an end to field trials of GM crops, and the restoration of our 200 mile fishing limit.

FAIR PLAY FOR ENGLAND: The setting up of an English Parliament to give England the same right of self-determination within the United Kingdom as enjoyed by Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: An major expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The introduction of referenda and direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Forces and cost jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last policy. Like all the other democratic political parties, the British National Party includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of Labour, the Tories and the Lib-Dems. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Council Backtracks Over Swimming Pool Dress for Non-Muslims

CROYDON council has backtracked on rules forcing swimmers to cover up at a public pool to avoid offending Muslims.

Originally Croydon council wanted to bar non-Muslims from swimming if they refused to comply with the dress code.

The dress code was put in place for weekend swimming sessions for Muslims at Thornton Heath Leisure Centre despite a general ban on wearing T-shirts in the pool.

The council's online statement read: "During special Muslim sessions, male costumes must cover the body from the navel to the knee and females must be covered from the neck to the ankles and wrists."

The BNP say that it is Muslims who should have to adopt our ways and integrate with us - not the other way around. By even considering rules like this Croydon council have showed what utter contempt they have for non-Muslims and exactly which community they are trying to pander to for votes.

Teacher Facing Jail for Sex With 13-Year-Old

MOST people will now have seen these faces of evil, the murderers of Baby Peter, as further shocking details of the case were released to the public domain.

The boy's wretched mother, boyfriend and his brother have finally been named as Tracey Connelly, Steven Barker and Jason Owen (who changed his name after Baby Peter's death to try to distance himself from the incident). Together they subjected Baby Peter to an appalling ordeal that left him with 50 injuries, including a broken back.

New details of the suffering that Baby Peter endured were also disclosed for the first time as well as further examples of how Haringey council and other authorities failed to protect him. These included:

How Connelly had three other children - two of whom were placed on the "at risk" protection register alongside Peter by social services - but none were taken away from her until the boy died.

She was pregnant with her fifth child, her first with Barker, when Peter died and gave birth while on remand.

Social workers failed to realise that Barker was living with the family and abusing Peter for nine months before his death, despite repeated visits from the authorities.

The authorities also failed to notice when Barker's brother Owen moved in with his 15-year-old runaway girlfriend just five weeks before Peter died.

Peter was left in his cot for hours on end, was treated worse than a dog, had his finger-tips sliced off with a craft knife, his nails pulled out with pliers and every scrap of his clothing was covered in blood. Haringey council tried to prevent Connelly and Barker from being named until 2026 to protect Peter's siblings but a High Court judge disagreed, saying the "boil must be lanced".

Under current laws, these vicious killers will be given new identities and police protection when they are released, which speculation says may be between three and ten years. This is on top of the estimated £50,000 a year EACH that will be required to keep them 'safe' inside prison.

Just three to ten years for the brutal and systematic torture and murder of a helpless tot.

The policy of the British National Party is to "restore capital punishment for paedophiles, terrorists and murderers as an option for judges in cases where their guilt is proven beyond dispute (such as with DNA or other compelling evidence)."

These monsters have no place in our society and should be made an example of. It is disgusting that these creatures will ever walk free again - let alone receive new identities and protection at the taxpayers' expense. Baby Peter will never get a second chance, his life cut short in the most brutal way - why should his abusers be granted anything better?

Knott, who appeared in court via a video link system from his remand cell at the city's prison, pleaded guilty to the charges of sexual activity with a child and sexual grooming.

He will be sentenced on September 30 but was remanded in custody. Knott was arrested last June during a physics and chemistry lesson at the 955-pupil Elton High School in Bury, Greater Manchester.

Perhaps the General Teaching Council should spend more time and energy protecting children from perverts like Knott than carrying out PC witch-hunts for teachers who support the BNP.

THEY SHOULD NEVER WORK AGAIN

IN DECEMBER disgraced Sharon Shoemith (right), Haringey's head of children's services, was sacked. She refused to shoulder any blame.

Three Haringey social workers were fired, along with Clive Preece, its head of children in need and safeguarding.

Dr Sabah Al-Zayyat, 52, who did not notice Baby P had broken ribs two days before he died, was also dismissed.

These people were all complicit in the tragic and brutal death of Baby Peter. The British National Party are appalled at the idea they could ever work with children or be put in charge of the care of others again.

They are a disgrace and should be barred from their profession and live with their actions.

There was a very important meeting on the Thursday evening where our European Parliament staff were briefed on what was expected from them over the next five years. Top of the agenda was the filling-in of detailed worksheets to provide a comprehensive account of the work done on behalf of each MEP by all those on the payroll.

I cannot emphasise how important this is. Our opponents are scrutinizing our every move and they are determined to try to "trip us up" over the multitude of rules and regulations that govern Members of the European Parliament. We must adhere to every single diktat that determines the way we work and not give our opponents even the slightest opportunity to try to undermine the work that we do for our constituents during our time in office.

Last month I submitted my first question to the European Parliament on behalf of one of my constituents.

Just days after I was elected, I was contacted by a fuel service company asking me to investigate whether it was possible to persuade the European Parliament to postpone an Energy Using Products (EuP) Directive which would prohibit oil fired cooking and heating from 2013.

They were hoping that I could lobby for a delay on the legislation until 2018 by which time the homes still heated by oil would have found an alternative energy supply.

I told the director of the company that I was sympathetic to his request and would ask one of our researchers for a briefing on this matter.

I have now been able to table this question to the European Parliament.

"Is the council aware that:

"1. 1.1 million homes in the United Kingdom are heated by oil fired heating boilers and that the directive will prevent them from buying replacement boilers from 2013.

West Mids BNP Enters Intensive Training Phase

LOOKING to follow up recent election successes, the West Midlands branch of the British National Party assembled around thirty prospective candidates for next year's local election, to commence their basic party training.

These candidates came from all over the West Midlands, representing Dudley, Sandwell, Wolverhampton, North Birmingham, East Birmingham, South Birmingham and Bromsgrove.

Tutors for the day were BNP West Midlands Regional Training Organiser, Richard Lumby and Nuneaton & Bedworth BNP local councillor, Martyn Findley. Mr Lumby delivered three modules, covering candidate suitability, community politics and advice for public speaking. Mr Findley delivered one module, about "Life as a BNP councillor" in his usual gutsy style.

These training seminars are intended to be duplicated

QUEUE TO FIND OUT MORE ABOUT THE BNP AT COUNTY SHOW

AS usual Cumbria BNP were out campaigning on Saturday 8th August.

"A local political party knows it is established and regarded by the public as relevant to the community when each August it takes its usual stand at the Dalston Show and is immediately faced with a queue of people seeking information about its policies, merchandise and literature," says Alistair Barbour, the North West regional secretary and organiser of Cumbria BNP's summer campaign.

The Dalston Show, run by the Dalston Agricultural Society, is one of Cumbria's premier agricultural shows. It has a long history of presenting local farming to the community. As well as the very popular cattle classes, the show offers a place where local people can show their crafts, covering everything from flower arranging to photography. The trade stands attract exhibitors from all over Cumbria, the North of England and South West Scotland.

"At the show we had a pitch right in the centre. We are a regular fixture now at all the Cumberland shows and together with our presence on the streets, on the doorsteps, in the town centres and at other major events, this is having a noticeably positive effect on the whole perception of the party in the county" said Alistair.

MELKSHAM in Chippenham has held its first ever British National Party meeting to a highly positive response, reports the party's Mid West press office.

"As part of our ongoing improvement of service to members, the BNP's Chippenham constituency group is varying the venues for monthly meetings," new Chippenham organiser Cllr Mick Simpkins said.

"August was the turn of Melksham to host its first ever meeting. The move of venue, booked under the party name as is our practice, proved to be a huge success with members and a large number of new faces and enquirers turning up to their first ever BNP meeting," Cllr Simpkins said. The guest speaker was Mike Howson, National Youth Officer and newly appointed South West regional organiser.

During the evening's proceedings, a certificate of merit was given to the Melksham contact Mark Kennedy as the most "outstanding activist" during the recent Euro and council elections campaign. The meeting finished with the good news that Mr Kennedy will be contesting the Spa ward in September in a Melksham Town Council by-election.

BNP SCOTLAND WORK WITH VETERANS GROUP

A MEETING took place over the weekend between BNP Scottish leader, Gary Raikes, and the Chairman of Forward Edge Battle Area (FEBA) in the Glasgow based charity's drop in centre.

FEBA, the only organisation of its kind in Scotland, helps people to make the transition from life in the armed forces to "Civvy Street". WOLVERHAMPTON MEETING ATTRACTS ALL COMERS

OVER 50 people from a wide area including Shropshire, Staffordshire, Birmingham and the Black Country, as well as locals, met for the latest Wolverhampton British National Party branch meeting to listen to local activists speak.

Wolverhampton organiser, Simon Patten, opened proceedings with a detailed account of fundraising and canvassing reports in the lead up to the European elections in June and more recent tales.

Mr Patten also introduced the new Wolverhampton British National Party team, himself the organiser, Mike Kiely (deputy organiser), Dave Bradnock the new fund-holder, and local BNP first points of contact John Painter (Wolverhampton South East), Stuart Gardner (Wolverhampton South West) and Mike Mulvihill (South Staffordshire).

The second speaker, making his maiden public speech, was Mr Painter, who briefly told of his reasons for joining the British National Party and then spoke of the first few months after joining, and in a light hearted manner, of some notable incidents that had happened to him during the table top sales and public canvassing that Mr Patten had previously mentioned.

Following the main interval, where a sumptuous buffet was provided by Mr Kiely and his daughter, the main speaker of the night, Phil Reddall spoke of several worldwide stories of how indigenous populations had struggled to overcome devastation, such as Japan, where following world war two, the Japanese economy had prospered to the point where Japan is the world leader in many industries and technologies.

Mr Reddall concluded by saying that the only way that the indigenous peoples of Britain could prosper could be under a British National Party

The second speaker, making his maiden public speech, was Mr Painter, who briefly told of his reasons for joining the British National Party and then spoke of the first few months after joining, and in a light hearted manner, of some notable incidents that had happened to him during the table top sales and public canvassing that Mr Patten had previously mentioned.

Following the main interval, where a sumptuous buffet was provided by Mr Kiely and his daughter, the main speaker of the night, Phil Reddall spoke of several worldwide stories of how indigenous populations had struggled to overcome devastation, such as Japan, where following world war two, the Japanese economy had prospered to the point where Japan is the world leader in many industries and technologies.

Mr Reddall concluded by saying that the only way that the indigenous peoples of Britain would prosper, would be under a British National Party government.

Battle Area (FEBA) in the Glasgow based charity's drop in centre.

FEBA, the only organisation of its kind in Scotland, helps people to make the transition from life in the armed forces to "Civvy Street". It is the brainchild of Hamilton man and ex-soldier Tommy Moffat, a former Queen's Own Highlander for 15 years, who served in Northern Ireland and the Falkland Islands conflict.

Tommy has organised various open days, charity events, appeals and a Highland games-style gathering at Strathclyde Park over the last two years to raise money for his charity.

He added: "FEBA offers support to ex-servicemen and women to improve their quality of life and well-being, by increasing their knowledge and awareness of the assistance that is available.

we assist the families of veterans by helping them have more of an understanding of what the ex-servicemen may have experienced. FEBA feels that offering such services to Scotland's veterans improves their social skills and eases them back into their communities."

According to service users' feedback, Tommy has established that these services are invaluable and very much needed.

He added: "FEBA receives no government funding and relies solely on the donations that are made to the charity".

Although various promises have been made by political parties none have delivered, that is except the British National Party.

Walter Hamilton, the new Lanarkshire and former Glasgow organiser, met Mr Moffat over a year ago and thought his idea for in goods and donations etc for FEBA. This is a much needed charity for all of our veterans so I can't really understand why the present government does nothing."

"This weekend's meeting was to formalise BNP Scotland's association with FEBA and discuss our plans for future developments that will be beneficial to both our organisations.

"This is an exciting project that as Tommy put it is "forward thinking and modern as is the BNP." Pressure has already been applied by the usual suspects to stop this association but to no avail. Mr Moffat is a well known and highly respected figure whose primary concern is for 'his' ex-servicemen and veterans and he will not bow to political correctness or threats from the far left. FEBA will be issuing a press release later this week."

LEIGH BNP GIVES TUMULTUOUS WELCOME TO NICK GRIFFIN

AROUND 250 people gave a tumultuous welcome to British National Party leader Nick Griffin MEP, in Leigh in his first appearance in the North West town after winning a seat in the European parliament, reports meeting chairman Charles Mather.

Mr Griffin regaled the eager audience with his experiences in the European Parliament in Brussels, which included petty harassment by extremist leftist officials who are happy to welcome all other organisations, even those with terrorist associations.

"In a way it is to our credit as the people on the Euro gravy train must be aware that unlike the other organisations we are not prepared to join in with the corruption," Mr Griffin said.

Mr Griffin's speech was rounded off by a question and answer session which covered almost every topic one could think of.

Mr Mather said that a large number of people attending the meeting had only come out of interest and had never attended any sort of BNP meeting before.

"They were all impressed and I have already been contacted by several who have said they now understand why so many people voted BNP in the last elections," Mr Mather said.

ULSTER BNP DISTRIBUTES 2,000 LEAFLETS IN LARNE

AUGUST saw a team of British National Party activists from Ulster distribute more than 2,000 leaflets to the Craigyhill estate in Larne, reports our Ulster correspondent.

"The team's efforts were rewarded by a warm reception from an eager public, most of whom expressed their profound gratitude at receiving the BNP's literature," reports our correspondent.

"Many expressed their disdain for the local parties, particularly the unionists who they felt had let them down badly over the years. A common complaint was that none of the other parties had any plans to face up to the problem of mass immigration, and that they merely echoed the politically correct nonsense about 'respecting diversity' espoused ad nauseam by their political masters in Westminster.

"The leafleting team were extremely happy with the results of the session, and came away with the impression that voters were far from happy with the quality and performance of their current elected public representatives," our correspondent said.

"It was a positive encouragement to keep on 'fighting the good fight,' as one of our activists put it, and the people of Northern Ireland can be assured that the BNP here will go from strength to strength until we become a serious political force for the common good."

The Immigration Invasion: How Third World Immigration is Destroying the First World and What Must be Done to Stop It - Arthur Kemp

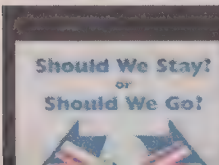

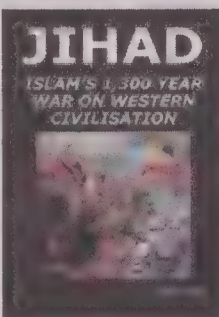

A shocking book detailing the full extent of the Third World immigration wave which is swamping the Western World. Using the latest numbers and projections, it explains why Third World immigration will destroy the First World, with individual chapters on Britain, Europe, Russia, Canada, the USA, Australia and New Zealand. Shows that, if left unchecked, the First World will be overrun within the next 40 years. Softcover, 140 pp. £13.14 including p&p.

A Nation of Immigrants? A Brief Demographic History of Britain David Conway. A must read! Using genetic, archeological and historical evidence, this book shows that the British people are NOT a "nation of immigrants" as the far left lies, but actually a highly homogenous group of people with roots going back millennia. Perfect to refute those who try and justify today's mass Third World immigration. Softcover, 104 pp. £9.00 including p&p.

ILLEGAL DEMONSTRATION

ON 12th June, 2009 I was asked by the then editor of Freedom, Martin Wingfield, to investigate the circumstances of the attack on our MEPs Nick Griffin and Andrew Brons outside the Houses of Parliament.

Martin was particularly concerned that the law prohibiting demonstrations in the vicinity of Parliament Square without authorisation might have been broken by the demonstrators.

As a result of this I made a Freedom of Information request to the Metropolitan Police to ask them whether Unite Against Fascism had obtained authorisation from the Metropolitan Police Commissioner to hold its demonstration.

I have now received a reply which confirms that no prior notification of the demonstration was given. UAF are now being investigated by the Police for holding an illegal demonstration

My anger subsided after I read in The Telegraph, the following, the headline screamed

"immigration rules are a drain on the country, says judge" he claimed it contributed to the National Debt and hundreds of thousands of illegal immigrants were abusing Britains border controls and they were causing an enormous strain on Britains resources"

The name of the Judge? Judge Trigger. speaking at Liverpool Crown Court. Therefore I heartily recommend that the dog's name is changed from 'Nigger' to 'Trigger' and every time we hear it in future it will remind us of a judge who in my opinion spoke sense.

SECOND REFERENDUM

AS Ireland approaches its second referendum on the constitutional changes that would allow parliament to ratify the Lisbon Treaty into law, it has been announced that broadcasters will not have to give equal air time to opposing sides in the referendum debate.

This move comes just months after RTÉ, Ireland's state broadcaster, was cleared over a bias charge in its coverage of the previous Lisbon Treaty referendum in June 2008 where it was alleged coverage was weighted heavily in favour of the 'Yes' campaign.

In the summer of 1716, A Cornish cabin boy named Thomas Pellow and fifty-one of his comrades were captured at sea by Barbary corsairs. Their captors -- Ali Hakem and his network of fanatical Islamic slave traders -- had declared war on the whole of Christendom. Poked, prodded and put through their paces at the great slave markets of Morocco, thousands of Europeans were sold to the highest bidder. Thomas Pellow was bought by the tyrannical sultan, Moulay Ismail, as a personal slave, and he would witness first-hand the barbaric splendour of the imperial Moroccan court, as well as experience daily terror for twenty-three years. I was also told that the film makers are agonising over the name of Wing Commander Guy Gibson VC.DSO.DFC (with bars) Commanding Officer of 617 Squadron based at Scampton's dog.

As we all know it was a black Labrador named "NIGGER." In this more peaceful age when 52,000 young men are not being blown out of the sky by German Ack Ack or shot to pieces by Luftwaffe night fighters, people have time on their hands to think of such unimportant things as the changing of a dogs name!

I was incredulous when told this and asked what name was being considered and was told 'Trigger'.

I was immediately appalled at the anguish this could possibly cause to the very much loved Trigger in Only Fools and Horses or even poor Roy Rogers horse.

This move comes just months after RTÉ, Ireland's state broadcaster, was cleared over a bias charge in its coverage of the previous Lisbon Treaty referendum in June 2008 where it was alleged coverage was weighted heavily in favour of the 'Yes' campaign.

It is a clear attempt to bulldoze the legislation through the Dáil, Ireland's parliament, by forcing the electorate's arm, just as was done with the Nice Treaty which the Irish electorate originally rejected in a 2001 referendum before being 'offered the opportunity' to vote again the following year.

The government has also spent the last year ramping up fear, uncertainty and doubt. It is effectively holding a gun to the heads of the electorate claiming that 'the economy will collapse if we don't sign up'.

It has loaded the dice because it doesn't trust the electorate to do its bidding and by scrapping equal air time for the 'No' campaign it hopes to brainwash voters into accepting the treaty.

Let's just hope the people of Ireland show the independence that they are famous for and resist election of our two MEPs, has naturally attracted many new members to our Cause. Many of these people will not, in all probability, have previously been 'political animals' but will have come to us, the last bastion of British freedom, in a desperate search for a means to halt the destruction of our civilization by the traitors who currently govern us.

The calling of the General Election is imminent and another rigorous campaign lies ahead for our Party. I would urge those new members to now take that next bold step and become involved in activism in their own local areas. As our 'old hands' will testify, there really is nothing like the comradeship of a leafleting session in the company of fellow-patriots to get the adrenalin flowing and to leave one with the exhilaration of knowing that a vital blow has been struck against the enemies of our People. Let the inspiring words of Calgacus, leader of the Caledonians against the Roman invaders of Scotland, sound the clarion call: "On then into action! And as you go, think of those that went before you - and those that shall come after".

JOIN PEOPLE LIKE YOU IN THE BNP

This is the real face of the British National Party, a family organisation that wants to put British people first. The BNP doesn't 'hate' anyone, we just want to make sure that our own people aren't turned into second class citizens. The British National Party doesn't blame immigrants either - we blame the politicians who have let this country down.

You can join people just like you who want to make a difference. People who feel just the same way about this country and its problems as you do. You'll find that the BNP is made up of people from all walks of life - doctors, teachers, policemen and housewives - united by their love for their country.

There has never been a better time to join up. The British National Party has hundreds of councillors, county councillors, a London Assembly member and two MEPs. The British National Party is a real force in British politics and you can be a part of it!

the BNP Church Ban

I was shocked at turning on my radio Sunday morning to listen to the Radio 4 programme 'Sunday' to hear that BNP members are to be banned from becoming members of the Methodist Church.

I started thinking of my grandmother who had been a staunch Methodist and wondered what she would have thought of her Church banning her granddaughter in this way. I'm sure she would have been terribly upset. Every Sunday she attended the Church hall on the corner of her road, and I wonder whether it ever proclaimed on the board outside the words from Matthew's gospel Judge not, that ye be not judged.

I still have the old black and white photo taken of her on a Methodist Church outing back in the 1930's showing a group of smiling white faces peering out at me from the distant past. For her the Methodist Church was her prop against adversity. She had lost two brothers at the battle of the Somme and a son who died at the age of four from meningitis.

Another photo I have in my possession shows her with my grandfather and my older brother

Another photo I have in my possession shows her with my grandfather and my older brother as a baby, but they are both looking very upset and worried. My mother explained that it was taken just as my father, by then their only son, was called up to serve in the second world war. What they must have been feeling at that time! Fortunately my father came back although injured.

I just wonder whether those who have made this decision in the Methodist Church to ban the BNP have grandparents who even lived in this country let alone who suffered as mine did for it. I suspect not, and yet they consider they have the right to deny me membership of their Church. Be assured one day God will judge them.

MIGRANTS GAIN ENTRY TO BRITAIN IN BORDER AGENCY BUS

AN ILLEGAL immigrant is on the run after smuggling himself into Britain underneath a coach full of Border Agency officers returning from France.

The immigration officers - whose job is meant to involve stopping illegal immigrants entering the country - were oblivious to the stowaway hiding between the fuel tank and the chassis of the coach bringing them through the Channel Tunnel until they arrived at their depot in Folkestone.

The man then made his break for 725,000 other illegal immigrants living here.

The coach driver, a contractor who does not work for the government agency, gave chase but failed to catch him. If he is caught, it will no doubt take years to deport him, largely as a result of human-rights laws.

The humiliating incident comes after repeated complaints that Labour and the other establishment parties have failed to put a stop to the vast numbers of illegal immigrants who pour across swamping our island nation.

New figures published last week revealed that the number of migrants arrested after hiding in the backs of lorries and vans nearly doubled in the first half of this year - up to 13,715 compared to 7,760 in the same period last year.

The British National Party calls for stronger migration controls and an immediate end to all further immigration into our already overcrowded island. Britain is already the most densely populated country in Europe.

725,000 other illegal immigrants living here.

The coach driver, a contractor who does not work for the government agency, gave chase but failed to catch him. If he is caught, it will no doubt take years to deport him, largely as a result of human-rights laws.

The humiliating incident comes after repeated complaints that Labour and the other establishment parties have failed to put a stop to the vast numbers of illegal immigrants who pour across the UK's borders every year

swamping our island nation.

New figures published last week revealed that the number of migrants arrested after hiding in the backs of lorries and vans nearly doubled in the first half of this year - up to 13,715 compared to 7,760 in the same period last year.

The British National Party calls for stronger migration controls and an immediate end to all further immigration into our already overcrowded island. Britain is already the most densely populated country in Europe, enough is enough.

AN ILLEGAL immigrant is on the run after smuggling himself into Britain underneath a coach full of Border Agency officers returning from France.

The immigration officers - whose job is meant to involve stopping illegal immigrants entering the country - were oblivious to the stowaway hiding between the fuel tank and the chassis of the coach bringing them through the Channel Tunnel until they arrived at their depot in Folkestone.

The man then made his break for freedom, to join the estimated 725,000 other illegal immigrants living here.

The coach driver, a contractor who does not work for the government agency, gave chase but failed to catch him. If he is caught, it will no doubt take years to deport him, largely as a result of human-rights laws.
